

Absolute Facts!

Consider: This was a Capital Murder Trial

All these things, plus many others, were wrong in this trial.

The murder weapon at trial is not what killed the Hodges.

No weapon, no witness, no motive, no confession and no DNA.

Bramblett's white truck is not the red truck the woman saw.

The red truck came from a driveway West of the Hodges house, a painting contractor warehouse at the time.

The police never investigated anyone but Bramblett. No one else!

Blaine Hodges was drunk when he went to bed but the Medical Examiner claimed there was no alcohol in his system.

There was no blood on Bramblett or anything he owned when they searched his truck and possessions.

The audio tapes Bramblett made were edited, and was not allowed to hear them before played in court.

Bramblett was not allowed to see any of the pictures of the crime scene shown in court.

The firearms testimony has been recanted; the "confession" to the jail house snitch has been recanted.

Bramblett was not allowed to see any of the discovery evidence.

The alledged murder weapon had no blood or flesh on it when the shots were fired against the victim's heads.

Bramblett was not allowed to fire his lawyers, wasn't allowed to fire the habeas lawyers or file his own appeal to the Supreme Court.

Earl Bramblett was murdered by Francis W. Burkart, Commonwealth Attorney, Randy Leach, Assistant Commonwealth attorney, Barry Keese, Virginia State Police Investigator, Mac Doubles, Attorney, Terry Grimes, Attorney, Roy Willett, Trial Circuit Judge. They were aided and abetted by Bill Conrad, Virginia Firearms Examiner, Tracy Turner, jail house snitch, both of whom recanted their testimony, and Dr. David Oxley, the Medical Examiner and his Assistant, Dr. Mussallo.
