

Find a Career in Language Translation

New Book Offers Tips and Strategies from Experienced Language Professional

The growing demand for global communication in almost every area of business is good news for people fluent in more than one language. In her new book, A Career in Language Translation (published by AuthorHouse), Carline Férailleur-Dumoulin offers insightful information to multilingual and bilingual professionals seeking to break into the field or find new opportunities.

A Career in Language Translation serves as a guide for language professionals to hone their skills, sell their services, generate more revenue and equip themselves with the tools necessary to excel. Dumoulin draws from more than 13 years of experience in language translation to create a comprehensive reference for teachers and students of translation programs, as well as the wide variety of language professionals currently in the field.

“If you are interested in entering the field and do not know where or how to start, you will most certainly find your answer in this book,” Dumoulin writes. Many tips work for seasoned professionals too. The book details how to prepare a resume and business cards. It also covers strategies for job hunting, from freelance or in-house translation to work with an international organization or the federal government. Those interested in running their own translation business can find start-up suggestions and ideas on how to maintain success.

A Career in Language Translation arms readers with information on how to market their services, be aware of Internet scams specific to the field and address payment and legal issues. Additional features include a glossary of terms, a list of international organizations hiring language professionals and lists of translation and interpretation schools and organizations in the United States and abroad. A combination of extensive research and firsthand experience, A Career in Language Translation provides tools and resources for building a successful career.

About the Author: Carline Férailleur-Dumoulin is the founder and president of CF Professional Translations, LLC. She holds a bachelor’s degree in economics from Florida International University and a certificate in general translations from New York University. She is a longstanding member of the American Translators Association and the American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages. Dumoulin has more than 13 years of experience in language translations, including teaching an introduction to Spanish translation course at Queens College in New York and managing the translation department of a private translation company in Manhattan. In addition, she has 10 years of experience in the banking industry. Dumoulin is a language test evaluator for several translation companies in the United States and has worked abroad in several countries, including India, Haiti, Jamaica, Puerto Rico and the Dominican Republic. She is fluent in English, French, Haitian Creole, and Spanish. She has been a guest speaker at numerous venues throughout her career. Most recently, she was featured on Spark Plug Radio in a blog cast with Anthony Thomas, the founder and publisher of People You Need to Know magazine. Dumoulin’s company has been featured in this Atlanta-based publication for the past three years.

Softcover ISBN: 978-1-4389-4422-7 & Hardcover ISBN: 978-1-4389-4423-4

Carline Férailleur-Dumoulin
Tel: (770) 887-9311
Email: clareece1@yahoo.com